CHORUS GIRL WIFE JOINS DIVORCE COLONY

NEW YORK, Oct. 18 .- Mrs. J. Raynot Stores Wells, formerly known as Irene Rishop, the chorus girl wife, for love of whom the young society man paid the price of parental displeasure, banish-ment from Newport society, apprenticeship in the navy, and a fifteen days sentence in the brig for running away to visit her, is now reported to have oined the divorce colony in Sioux Falls,

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. William Stores Wells who know what a shock to them was the discovery that their only son had married "only a chorus girl," have long expected a divorce. A report accepted by some who know the family is that the chorus girl will be provided for most liberally, and that she will obtain a divorce on the ground of desertion.

Wakefield procured the Ghent dogs while on a special trip to Europe in search of canine police aides. These dogs have been trained to hold up any person not in uniform and will be kept muzzled from daybreak until 16 at night. Then, according to the present plans, they are to be turned loose in the outlying preincts to keep belated wayfarers in check until their barking attracts the bluecoat on the beat and the prisoner gives an account of himself. In this way it is thought many underworld prowlers can be prevented from committing attacks on girls and making robberies.
